The University of New Haven
Part time Adjunct Faculty
Lighting Design & Specification – Interior Design
AutoCAD and Revit Architecture – Interior Design
Search # - SP 13

The University of New Haven currently has a position available for an adjunct instructor to teach Lighting Design and Specification in the Interior Design Department. The qualified applicant must possess at least one degree in Interior Design or Architecture and have at least two years experience in residential and/or commercial lighting design. It is necessary that the applicant have a command of natural and artificial lighting as a design element, the impact of perception, psychology, brightness and color, lighting construction documents, luminaries, lighting products, auxiliary equipment, controls, photometrics, and electricity.

The University of New Haven currently has a position available for an adjunct instructor to teach AutoCAD and Revit Architecture in the Interior Design Department. The qualified applicant/s must possess at least one degree in Interior Design or Architecture and have at least two years relevant Interior Design and/or Architectural practice experience. It is necessary that the applicant have a command of AutoCAD as a design drawing and drafting tool for the development of floor plans, demolition and new construction plans, reflected ceiling plans, electrical plans, wall elevations, finish schedules and type text/notes and/or Revit Architecture as a digital modeling, BIM, and rendering tool to support the design process, documentation, construction, and testing of a building.

Qualified applicants should submit a cover letter and resume to: hrdept@newhaven.edu

Search Committee #SP -13

University of New Haven
300 Boston Post Road • West Haven, CT 06516

You must include the search # in the subject line of your email to be considered for the position

UNH is an Equal Opportunity, Affirmative Action Employer